BASIC-ABSTRACT:

The apparatus includes a manual data input device and a storage device which stores details of several procedures that are each identified by a procedure identification, a specified procedure identification and user-generated data. The user-generated data are processed according to the identified procedure.

An indication of the user-generated data is modulated for transmission to a reception centre. Preferably the apparatus receives the procedure identification and writes it into the storage device. The processor preferably compares the user-generated data against values determined from the identified procedure.

USE - E.g. for interactive television applications, market research, interactive advertising, wagering, dynamic viewing, polling and customer enquiries.
